Means to Lead
Funded By UN WOMEN

About the Project:

Means to Lead (M2L)

Means to Lead is a collaborative initiative implemented by SKUS and JNUS with the support of UN Women. The project is dedicated to empowering women and vulnerable communities through skill development, creativity, and sustainable livelihood opportunities.

The project operates through two training centers located in Whykong and Camp 3. The Whykong center works with participants from the host community, while the Camp 3 center supports women from the Rohingya community. Through inclusive training and community engagement, the project creates opportunities for participants to develop practical skills and become financially independent.

Within the handicraft trade, participants receive hands-on training in various traditional and creative techniques, including different styles of hand stitching and block batik work. These skills are transformed into beautiful handmade products that reflect creativity, cultural heritage, and craftsmanship.

This catalogue presents a collection of handcrafted products made by the talented beneficiaries of both centers.

Every product in this catalogue carries a story of dedication, resilience, and empowerment. By supporting these handcrafted creations, you are contributing to the economic empowerment of women and helping build stronger, more self-reliant communities.
